MESSAGE FROM REGISTRAR

Dear SJU family, Greetings.

It brings me immense pleasure to communicate with you through our University Newsletter. This platform has been envisioned as a vibrant space to celebrate our collective achievements, showcase our diverse talents, and foster a sense of community within our esteemed university. As the Registrar, I believe strongly in the power of communication and collaboration in advancing our university's mission. The University Newsletter serves as a conduit for sharing stories that inspire, inform and unite us.

We all are aware that "WORLD WATER DAY" is observed on 22nd March in order to encourage the sustainable management of freshwater resources. As we all are aware that the global community confronts a deepening water crisis propelled by burgeoning populations, rising demands and the effects of climate change. Particularly for developing states or nations, this poses growing social, economic and ecological challenges. Enhancing water management practices present an opportunity for nations to alleviate poverty and enhance their resilience. Moreover, we all know in our country, many states rely on shared water sources to fulfil their requirements. Consequently, they hold a vested interest in collaborating on the management of shared freshwater derived from rivers and lakes. The escalating climate emergency underscores the imperative need for cooperation and the advancement of effective governance to uphold peace among neighbouring states.

In order to enhance these efforts, we have to acknowledge the finite nature of water, prioritize relationship building through dialogue over shared responsibility for use of water, initiate effective water management to tackle climate change, constitute the organizations which are most impactful in advancing water diplomacy with a robust institutional mandate, a high level of technical capacity and extensive local knowledge and revise methods of water management to be free from colonial influences. With these efforts we can leverage water for peace

As we embark on this exciting journey together, I invite the younger generations who are to be the pillars of our Nation to start understanding these challenges, and to improve how we use and manage water so that both humans and nature receive equal shares. However it is necessary that governance for water management remains efficient and transparent.

Warm regards,

Dr. A. ROBERT XAVIER Registrar

Dear Readers,

Warm greetings from the editorial team to all the readers of SJU newsletters.

The theme for this issue is 'Leveraging water for peace' in commemoration with World Water Day which is observed every year on 22nd March. The First World Water Day was observed on 22nd March 1993 as an opportunity to learn more about water related issues, be inspired to tell others and take action to make difference raise awareness and inspires action to tackle the water and sanitation crisis. Today, 1.8 billion people use a source of drinking water contaminated with faeces, putting them at risk of contracting cholera, dysentery, typhoid and polio. The Sustainable Development Goals, launched in 2015, include a target to ensure everyone has access to safe water by 2030, making water a key issue in the fight to eradicate extreme poverty.

Water has become increasingly important in the fight against poverty and the deterioration of the environment as population grows. Public health and prosperity, food and energy systems, economic productivity and environmental integrity all rely on a well-functioning and equitably managed water cycle. From the Bengaluru crisis, we learned that residents are suffering from acute water shortages, as only those who receive piped water from rivers outside the city are still getting a regular supply. And as per a study published by the Centre in 2018, it was estimated that over 40 per cent of Bengaluru residents would not have access to drinking water by the end of the decade.

As an educated individual we can use water more carefully, reducing stress on the environment and water infrastructure. Water is a universal resource which is needed by all living beings on this planet to survive and it is our duty to preserve and take responsible as being said water can create peace or spark conflict. Water is powerful. It can wash away earth, put out fire, and even destroy iron.

"Water is life's matter and matrix, mother and medium. There is no life without water." - Albert Szent-Gyorgyi, M.D.
